Scientific Research On Meridian Testing

Dr. William A. Tiller, Ph.D.

- Stanford University
- Applied modern theories of electrical engineering to electrodermal testing.
- Substantiated that electrical conductance is different at meridian acupoints (data access point).
- Reported that there appears to be a connection between the organs and their specific acupoints.

Dr. Pierre de Vernejoul and Dr. Jean-Claude Darrass

- Injected a radioactive marker into subjects at classic acupuncture points.
- Used gamma camera imaging to track the isotopes.
- Showed that the tracer (isotope) traveled along classic meridian lines (paths).
- As a control, he also made random tracer injections at non-acupuncture points. They also injected the tracer directly into the veins and lymphatic channels and observed that there was no migration of the tracer at sites other than at the acupuncture points.
- Meridians are definitely real "vessels."
- They do not conform to any known anatomical structures whatsoever.

Is LifeScan Testing Safe?

The LS is the only device of its kind (for meridian assessment) which is fully licensed by the FDA.

Other Known Facts Related To Meridian Testing

- The body has both energetic and physical properties.
- The quickest and most sensitive indicator of changes in your health status is your energetic body.
- The body's bioelectric energy corresponds to the energy of the meridian system.
- Each meridian is like a electrical circuit.
- Imbalanced meridians = Impaired function.
- Balanced meridians = Optimal function.
- There are many acupoints (data access points) associated with each meridian.
- Meridian pathways energetically link organs and tissues.
- As the meridian energy becomes imbalanced a person moves away from wellness and towards illness.
- LifeScan Assessment is accomplished by taking readings at the acupoints to monitor the patient's bio-energetic energy.
- The LifeScan Assessment system is utilized for meridian assessment and functional evaluation.
- Functional health correlates to a patient's well-being and the ability of the body to cope with the environment.
- Balanced meridians correlate with improved functional health.
- Products that balance a meridian, improves cellular and genetic function.
- Other descriptions for LifeScan Assessment include Electrodermal Screening (EDS), and Electro-acupuncture According to Voll (EAV).

FAQs

What does LifeScan stand for?

Meridian Stress Assessment. This highly sensitive test can help detect the presence of subtle bioenergetic changes within the meridian system as described in Traditional Chinese Medicine. Furthermore, it is extremely effective at uncovering sensitivities to allergens that stimulate immune responses in the body. Although it does not diagnose a specific condition or disease process, it does provide exceedingly valuable information about your underlying state of health and wellness.

What is LifeScan Testing?

LifeScan is a computerized analysis of the bioenergetic state of the body. According to the Chinese, the meridians are a system of pathways that the "chi" or life force travels through within the body. Each meridian has acupoints (data access points) that can be measured electromagnetically. When the life force is blocked at an acupoint, the meridian is weakened or stressed.

All biochemical processes of the body are ultimately bioenergetic processes and can adversely effect cellular performance. In effect, all symptoms are first manifested in the bioenergetic system long before they are seen physically or biochemically. The bioenergetic system provides a clinician the earliest insight to imbalances occurring within the body.

What can I expect with the LifeScan test?

The LifeScan test is a easy, in-office assessment of the meridians pathways. An initial LifeScan test assesses all meridians in the body. This typically can be accomplished in approximately 45 minutes.

How will LifeScan testing and balancing benefit me?

A analysis provides a wealth of information about your internal bioenergetic state. You will discover which meridians are in a pathological, weakened or stressed state. The LS then prioritizes which meridians to balance and treat. Next, the LS will search a database of 30,000 plus remedies that include nutrients, vitamins, minerals, classical herbs, Chinese herbs, Ayurvedic herbs, naturopathic and homeopathic formulas. A remedy is located and selected by the LS based upon it's very own energetic blueprint and it's ability to balance your imbalanced meridians. The test can alert your health care practitioner to the presence of subtle bioenergetic changes and assist them in preventing serious illness and optimizing your health and wellness.

Additionally, the LS can identify and desensitize you to well over 20,000 known allergens including all foods and inhalants. This highly sensitive and accurate assessment works because each allergen's energetic blueprint has been identified and imprinted into the LS system. The blueprint is then broadcast into your bioenergetic field. Sensitivity testing is accomplished in very much the same manner that the meridians are balanced. Once the sensitivity is identified, an exact remedy is then located that will desensitize you to that allergen. Sensitivity testing is accomplished over multiple appointments.

How often do I need to have LifeScan testing done?

Each individual should be tested as frequently as is deemed necessary by the primary care provider. The greater the variances from optimal values, the more frequently a retest might be considered. The bioenergetic system can show remarkable changes in a short period of time.
